

Newton University,

71 LEXINGTON STREET.

This Institution was incorporated by the Legislature of Maryland, in March, 1845, with special reference to the education of those youth who were daily leaving our city to complete their studies, and to give advantages superior to those, which they then possessed. To secure these objects, the Legislature granted a most liberal Charter, with full University powers, "to confer any degree usually conferred in this country or in Europe."

Newton University is under the general supervision of a Board of Regents, appointed by the Legislature, but more directly of a Chancellor, President, and an Executive Council, together with an efficient Corps of Professors and Teachers. The exercises of the Institution are conducted at present in the building which Professor W. J. Waterman formerly occupied as "Philomathean Hall."

The government is strict, but kind and parental. It is conducted on the principle of thinking accurately, doing thoroughly, and training the students to govern themselves.

This Institution is now open for the reception of pupils in the several preparatory and collegiate classes.
